Manns stranger represents the experience of the world as it appears to the reader of Nietzsche, whose God is dead but who still carries a nostalgic memory of a divinely ordered world. He burned his diaries from that period in And I – now you may laugh, but you must understand me – I who have always seen myself as a sort of prince, I have surely found in you my predestined bride and companion.

Modern literature makes special demands, and this is particularly true of fiction. Both texts are erotic fantasies about a girl's hand. Der Weg zum Friedhof: Novelle. Specifically, the guardians were to oppose Heinrichs so called literary activity, which, the senator felt, did not meet the prerequisites for a professional writer, as he understood them: sufficient studies and knowledge. Lincoln: U of Nebraska P, If one considers Manns later biography, this is highly ironic: he would marry a woman of Jewish descent. In the long novel their increasing bitterness is played out, and its cause becomes obvious.
